CHAPTER IX.

The time slipped by. I found each particular day wearisome, but I had not kept my eyes open to without your presence. They looked forward now backward, as Robinson Crusoe when he calls him his wilderness.

"You object," I finally wrote to him, "I told you much more, for I was certain to be interrupted, so that my reading hours are principally those of my morning calls. I am glad that I was longer so, as possibly could."

Then would come, if they were any more, the "I am going to drive a little" or "I am going to walk a little" or "I am going to shop." I believe that many women take to shopping as men take to whist and the like because it is a time and because they have very particular fashions. I have gauged my father by you, saw the force of this.

The matter in dispute was of course the mission to Constantinople, together with my determining that nothing should persuade me to go, but to part in the journey, or on your return.

"But," remonstrated Sir Henry "I cannot see how you can be so unreasonable. The Secretary distinctly understands that we are together, and, indeed, expects it. I am sure that you will not be so unreasonable as to expect the Foreign Secretary to reply, 'are interesting; but I do not see how I can do so.' I am myself, and I am afraid that I shall have to leave you, Sir Henry."

Henry began to talk volitionally, and very diplomatically. "It is not very unreasonable, Lady Craven," he said, "most unreasonable. You seem utterly to forget that I have a right to go, and I owe me. I have chased you from a position

As I should have a collar, and contemplated early dinners, and a return to the simplest mode of life, I looked forward to a quiet and comfortable life. I thought that the modesty of my plans to a very great extent appeared Sir Henry's indignation and satisfied him that my objection to Georgia was not a mere whim.

Anyhow when we parted, he was more than usually gracious and paternal, and expressed a gallant wish that I should write him a letter. I promised to do so, and with which, of course, I promised to com-

BRITAIN AND THE STATES

The United States Administration temptuous of Its Own Party Press

Another matter out of which difference might have arisen between Great Britain and the United States has been an create a public opinion that commands respect of the President. The Boston question was brought to a final settlement, so has been the Mosquito question, and the Samoan question, probably to the satisfaction of without deference to the organs of the rabble. unwell, quarrelsome, snarling tone of Anglophobic press seems unable to the course of diplomacy. At all events Mr. Bayard, the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is unaffected by a banquet to be given next Thursday in London, in honor of the United States cruiser Chicago, in evidence of international courtesy which shows that the papers in question do not greatly influence relations between the two countries.

The party will be taken north in the steamer Newfoundland by Dr. F. A. Cook who will soon be on his way to the Arctic regions. The explorers will be landed at Rigolette, Labrador, about July 4, whence a boat will take them to Goose Bay, at the mouth of the Hamilton river.

Here the party will divide. Four men, including Prof. Hildebrand, will advance up the river, carrying their boats and provisions around the numerous and dangerous rapids. The remainder of the party will remain at headquarters on Goose Bay and explore the

THE PACIFIC CABLE.

Mr. Audley Coote Makes Some References Which Are Interesting.

In the course of an interview on his return to Tasmania from Europe, Mr. Audley Coote referred to the proposed Pacific cable. He said that "The route proposed by the Governments of France, Germany, America and other countries, and in which England is invited to join, is to have an international Pacific service from Vancouver island

The archbishop has sent a circular to the Roman Catholic clergy urging them to impress upon the faithful the necessity of vaccination. The Protestant clergy have also emphasized the need for vaccination. Public notices have been placed in the newspapers. The Mayor at the request of the Health department, calling upon all unvaccinated persons to present themselves for vaccination within fifteen days from Tuesday, at the office of any city physician, at either of the public dispensaries, at the office of the City hall, or at the office of public vaccination. Sawtchenko and Solobytchik which seems to render on the whole, the use of serum with a preparation made from cultures of the cholera bacilli, and afterward swallowed, a treatment of great value. With serum from their own blood, they inoculated guinea pigs, and found that these animals died of cholera much less frequently than guinea pigs against cholera. Usually it is the guinea pig who has first to face the chances of life or death in experiments of this kind. The results of these inoculations were so sure they were right that they shouldered the risk themselves.

and Australia have also maintained exports. The prices have also been at a low figure by the comparatively low harvests in Russia, India and the Argentine Republic last season, and by the rise of larger importations during the spring season. The importations from Canada are only about 5 per cent. of the quantity imported. There is no doubt that Canadian grain has made a favorable reputation on the markets, and a much greater quantity could have been disposed of had the prices offered

Mr Charles remarks that the hay trade Canada to the United Kingdom has undergone very large proportions during the year. The total importations according to the Board of Trade reports, were in 1892, 253,000 tons as compared with 61,000 in 1891. Of this quantity 63,000 tons were imported to Canada, and 190,000 to the United States. There is little doubt that the third of the latter quantity is made up of hay grown in Canada, representing as they are the principal way of the United

OUTRAGES BY STRIKERS.

Five Thousand Attack the Men of the National Tailor Work.

McKENZIE, Pa., June 6.—The expected trouble at the National Tailor Works was averted. Five thousand strikers broke down the entrance to the mill yard and drove the workmen employed in the various departments out of the plant. As the men were driven out of the mill yard, they were surrounded by another mob of strikers, and several were beaten with clubs and carried through the central part of the town. Several fire engines crossed the Monongahela river. They were pursued by the strikers down the river. One of the men was shot and severely disabled by his pursuers. His condition is critical.

The strikers intended to intercept the men when they came out of the works at six o'clock and try and induce them to join their ranks. The officials of the company anticipated the move and had the strikers dining room arrested in the works where the men at work could get their meals and have a safe place to go to. The strikers came out of the shops shortly after six o'clock.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

The ideal wife is certain to prove, he

God's best gift to man. She must be not only a helper, but a suitable companion in whose society the husband finds a forestate of the delights of heaven. She will be a woman in the truest sense—not a dress-maker's figure for the display of fine raiment. A woman endowed with the spirit of nobility, and moved by love to reverence all things good and true. Deep in sympathy with all that is noble; equally intense in hatred against all that is base. A generous, pure-souled, tender-hearted woman. Poor men have become giants in goodness and virtue through the love and care of such women.

The ideal wife need not be rich. She should be thrifty, however, and have learned how to wisely spend the money committed to her charge. To do this she should be able to cook and sew, and systematically direct the affairs of a household. It is a misfortune when women, otherwise helpful members of the community,

Our wife need not be beautiful in appearance. It is noteworthy that the most of the best women in history have been plain-looking. We do not object to a lovely woman shining at the head of our table;

Nor need the ideal wife be intellectually clever. What is of more importance than cleverness or perfect education is—the desire to know more. Here many wives fail. They have gone the usual course of study, and are satisfied. This is a mistake. Let the wife constantly desire to know more, and then she will be a fellow-student with the husband. What interests him will interest her. Besides, if in the course of events, "wife" is written "mother," she will then have a modern stock of knowledge at the service of her children. Nothing so undermines parental authority as the fact that the children are so advanced as to be able to correct the grammar and history of their parents. The moment the children feel they know better than their

She must, of course, love her husband with all the earnestness of love. We assume he is worthy of such devotion. His welfare and good name are precious in her eyos. What adds to his comfort and manliness she will try to give as far as lies in her power. Men are looking anxiously for women who approach within measurable distance of this "ideal"—women whom they can love and cherish and work for, and from whom they will get a heart's devotion in return.

Feather Beds.

Before putting away a feather bed it should be cleaned and aired well. When the ticking is soiled in spots remove the stains with ammonia water and soap. Dip a soft cloth into the ammonia and water, rub the spots with good soap, then rub with the cloth until the stain has disappeared. If the spot still remains after this treatment, scrub it briskly with a small, stiff scrubbing brush, rinse well in clean water and wipe with a clean, dry cloth. Place the bed in the air until perfectly dry, but never on any account, put it where the sun will shine on it, as sun draws out oil from the feathers, and will in a short time destroy them. If there is an attic store room it is an excellent place for putting away a feather bed for the summer. Have a clothes line across the room and over this hang the bed. Open the windows frequently to air it. If it must be placed away in a closet or box take it out a few days each month to see how it is doing.

times each month in a room, open the windows and let in the air. In the country some housewives cleanse a feather bed by putting it out on the grass when expecting rain and allowing it to get saturated, then when the rain ceases letting it remain, turning it and changing its position frequently until thoroughly dry.

Salted Almonds.

These are not difficult to make at home. After the nuts are shelled pour boiling water over them and let them stand two or three minutes, when they blanch very easily; then place them on flat tins or dishes and put them into the oven until they are a light brown, stirring them frequently so that they may brown evenly, and taking great care not to let them get too dark. When they are sufficiently brown remove them from the oven and let them get thoroughly cooled; then take the white of an egg, without beating, put it into a large dish and turn the almonds into it. Stir until the almonds are covered with the egg.

then spread once more upon the plates, and with a fine wire strainer sprinkle the salt over them evenly on both sides. Use the finest table salt. Return the almonds to the oven, stir them frequently. When cold they are ready for use.

asked an English interviewer of Mr. Rudyard Kipling and the latter replied: "Something, and what I have seen I like. It is a great country—a country with a future. When it is free, hard, tough, bracing climate—the climate that puts iron and grit into men's bones; and there are all good things to be got out of the ground if people will work for them. Why don't Englishmen think more of it as a field for English capital and enterprise? Surely there is an excellent opening both for the investor and the working Briton there.

Things don't perhaps move quite so fast as in the United States; but they are safer, and you are under the flag, you know, and among men of the slower stock and breed. Send your folks to Canada; and if they can't go themselves, let them send their money—plenty of it."

Royal Executioner.
Peter the Great particularly delighted in drawing teeth, and strictly enjoined his servants to tend for him when any service of that kind was to be performed. One day a favorite vulgar chambre seemed very desirous to have his teeth drawn, and when he asked him, what was

"Oh your majesty," said the canon, "my wife is suffering the greatest agony from toothache, yet she refuses to have the tooth taken out."

"If that is all," said Peter, "we will soon cure it; take me to her at once."

When they arrived the woman declared

"That is the way she talks, your majesty," said the valet; "she is suffering tortures."

"Hold her head and hands," said the czar; "I will have it out in a moment," and he instantly pulled out the indicated tooth.

with great dexterity, and procure medals from the husband. But the emperor discovered a little later that his valet had used him as an executioner to punish his wife who had never had an unsound tooth in her head.

DROWNED HER CHILD Mrs. Jepson, of London, Threw Her Baby in a Cistern.

THE WOMAN'S MIND DERANGED

The Sad Dead Was Committed in a Fit of Temporary Insanity—the Tragic Unsuccessful Attempt on the Life of Another Child.

LONDON, Ont., June 13.—The wife of Samuel M. Jepson, bookkeeper at Fitzgerald & Seaman's, while in a fit of despondency, yesterday drowned her young child, and tried to drown another. The circumstances are of a very sad nature, and the woman will be committed to the lunatic asylum.

Ever since the birth of the youngest child Mrs. Jepson has been mentally and physically unwell, and for a long time she has been under a physician's care in the hospital. She had apparently recovered, and on her own request was allowed to return home. Since that time she has had an occasional return of the mental malady. During the morning Mrs. Jepson received an urgent request to return home. It was found that Mrs. Jepson had thrown the baby into the soft water cistern and had made three efforts to drown her little boy. Twice she let him out because of his pleading, and the third time because she thought God had told her that she had done enough. The child was found immediately, but the baby was dead.

At Morrison, on Monday, a three-year-old daughter of John Farmer fell beneath a heavily laden wagon and was crushed to death.

THE SHOOTING AT JORDAN.
The Five Tramps Remanded for a Week—Conductor Turner's Condition.

JORDAN, Ont., June 13.—A serious shooting affair occurred here yesterday. Train No. 79, local freight, pulled into the yard at this place to allow the Pacific Express to pass. Five tramps were standing on the tracks. Conductor Turner of the local attempted to put them off, and one of them drew a revolver and began firing. Hitting Turner in the head twice and once in the shoulder, Brakeman Lynch immediately gave the alarm and the tramps fled into the woods, half a mile from the station. The constable was immediately summoned and he arranged a posse and started for them, surrounding the tramps in Daniel Hensberger's woods. The tramps began firing at the men as they advanced, the constable and his posse returning the fire. The constable's horse was killed. The Five Tramps Remanded for a Week—Conductor Turner's Condition.

JORDAN, Ont., June 13.—A serious shooting affair occurred here yesterday. Train No. 79, local freight, pulled into the yard at this place to allow the Pacific Express to pass. Five tramps were standing on the tracks. Conductor Turner of the local attempted to put them off, and one of them drew a revolver and began firing. Hitting Turner in the head twice and once in the shoulder, Brakeman Lynch immediately gave the alarm and the tramps fled into the woods, half a mile from the station. The constable was immediately summoned and he arranged a posse and started for them, surrounding the tramps in Daniel Hensberger's woods. The tramps began firing at the men as they advanced, the constable and his posse returning the fire. The constable's horse was killed.

At Morrison, on Monday, a three-year-old daughter of John Farmer fell beneath a heavily laden wagon and was crushed to death.

The Cost of Keeping a Cow.

Farm Utensils.
It is painful to ride through the country and note the waste that is going on in farm tools. Valuable mowers, binders and reapers are left all the year round. Plows are left all the year round. Winter plow. Wagons are left under the wheels of the barn or out in more open places. Cultivators, drills, rakes, all kinds of stumps, are exposed to the weather summer and winter. Every man knows that a piece of wood left out of doors for any length of time will decay. He knows also full well that iron will rust. Paint is short lived. Rules rendered it soon wastes off and leaves the bare metal exposed. Frost and heat, rain and sun, will ruin the paint. The most powerful agents in the destruction of farm implements. One of these tools if well made originally and cared for properly will last a lifetime. The carter's wagon never leaves his utensils thus exposed.

Wife—"Yes, I know. You would have settled down in Corsica, and spent your life grubbing about bad luck and hard times."

Hard to Suit.

Employment Agent—"What was the matter with your last place?"

Domestic—"The missus was too young. It made me look old."

Married in Haste.

Neighbor—"The Widow Gray's marriage was rather sudden, wasn't it?"

Friend—"Yes, her daughter's baby was beginning to talk, and the widow wanted to stop the wedding over before the kid learned to say 'granda.'"

One of Many.

Diner—"What did Mrs. Blank die of?"

Waiter—"Work and worry."

Diner—"What about?"

"She died to keep her house clean enough to live in."

A PESTILENCE LIKE THE GREAT PLAGUE OF LONDON.

"With or without premonitory warning in the shape of malaise or chill, there is sudden onset of fever, rising to 103° or over. There is much headache and general disturbance, accompanied by stupor, from 12 to 24 hours a glandular swelling occurs in the neck, armpits or groin, rapidly enlarging to the size of a foetus's eye. It is hard and exceedingly tender. With the subsiding of the fever, the patient sinks deeper into a condition of stupor, usually at the end of 48 hours and sooner.

"If six days are reached recovery is hopeful. The glandular swelling shows signs of suppuration. In some cases septicæmia or vomiting of blood occurs; patients rarely survive."

A Plague of Rats.

A portion of the countryside bordering on the Voiga is being ravaged by these creatures as described as swarming over the country in millions, and damage already caused by the invaders approximately reaches an upward of 100,000,000. Many of the people have been forced to help in the panic-stricken in the wholesale destruction of innumerable enemy. It was observed curious sign of some coming event, that during two or three years every cat in the district gradually disappeared. The fugitives all took the direction, north, and the turn, the turn, of sort of lesser part in the government of Saratoff and Astrachan.
